INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE IN A RESEARCH STUDY!

The Stony Brook University School of Social Welfare is working together with community-based organizations to build a loneliness prevention intervention for migrant youth and young adults. Together with the social isolation caused by the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic and the rise in anti-immigrant sentiments; there is a clear need for innovative approaches to reduce loneliness and improve the health and well-being of immigrant communities.

If you work for an organization that provides services to migrant youth communities in NYC or Long Island, we invite you to participate in a one-hour virtual focus group held via Zoom to share your experiences in supporting migrant youth.

Please scan the QR code or visit [<https://tinyurl.com/3kxxub27>] to schedule a time to participate in a focus group.

As a thank you for your participation in our study, you will receive a $30 gift card. We look forward to collaborating with you!
