The School of Social Welfare is recognized by the New York State Education Department's State Board for Social Work as an approved provider of continuing education for licensed social workers (#0050).

AN EFFECTIVE APPROACH TO WORKING WITH COUPLES

Wednesday, June 8, 2016

9:00 am - 12:00 pm

3 Continuing Education contact hours for licensed social workers

Presenter:

Stephen Rabeno, LCSW-R; Ph.D.
Clinical Assistant Professor, School of Social Welfare,
Stony Brook University; Associate Director,
Hope House Ministries

Workshop Description:

This workshop is designed to help social workers and counselors who are interested in developing their skills in working with couples. Workshop participants will learn how to conduct the first interview, obtain a structure for continuing sessions, and understand the difference between marital/couple exploration and marital/couple counseling. The instructor will review some of the common presenting issues that bring couples to counseling as well as therapeutic skills designed to provide effective treatment. Topics will include sexual problems, communication, parenting, financial, anger and trust issues.

TRANSFORMING CHILDREN AND ADOLESCENTS' LIVES WITH SOCIAL AND EMOTIONAL LEARNING

Wednesday, June 8, 2016

1:00 pm - 4:00 pm

3 Continuing Education contact hours for licensed social workers

Presenter:

Robin DeLuca-Acconi, LCSW, Ph.D.
Adjunct Instructor, School of Social Welfare,
Stony Brook University

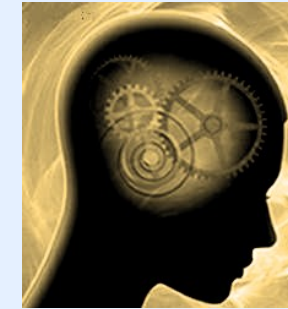

Workshop Description:

Social and emotional learning (SEL) is based on the understanding that the best learning emerges in the context of supportive relationships that make learning challenging, engaging, and meaningful. Social and emotional skills are critical to being a good student, citizen, and worker. Many risky behaviors (e.g., drug use, violence, bullying, and dropping out) can be prevented or reduced when integrated efforts are used to develop students' social and emotional skills. Many of our younger clients struggle with deficits in social skills and difficulty with regulating their emotions. These deficits often impact the quality of their relationships and impair their ability to succeed in many areas of life. This course will provide social workers or those in supportive roles with strategies to give children and adolescents the skills needed to become knowledgeable, responsible, caring and contributing members of society. This course will draw on information and research from Collaborative for Academic Social and Emotional Learning (CASEL). CASEL provides evidence based practice designed to increase social competencies in children and adolescents.

MIND-BODY MEDICINE AND NARRATIVE MEDICINE: COMPASSION AND ATTUNEMENT IN GROUP SUPERVISION

Friday, June 17, 2016

9:00 am - 2:00 pm

5 Continuing Education contact hours for licensed social workers

Presenter:

Joshua Hendrickson, LMSW
Adjunct Instructor, School of Social Welfare,
Stony Brook University

Workshop Description:

This workshop will provide an overview and introduction to the methods of using mind-body and narrative medicine to inform the practice of group supervision. It will comprise both didactic and experiential learning. The practices learned can be integrated into any group supervision process. Through the use of mindfulness-based and narrative medicine practices this work shop will provide the opportunity to enhance supervisee attunement to clients, cultivate greater compassion in the field, and support and implement the practice of self-care.

Location: Stony Brook University
(building and classroom location to be included in registration confirmation)
